CASHING IN

THERE may be a lot the matter with "our town" and all that sort of thing, but there is nothing wrong with its streets. Now that winter seems to have made up its belated mind to set in, the people of Prescott will begin cashing in on the improved streets.

It is to be hoped, too, that there will be no delay in extending the paving to the gates of Fort Whipple. Whenever two communities with as much traffic as the town and post are connected only by a dirt road, it means that somebody has not been taking advantage of the opportunities. But the work has been ordered on behalf of both the city and county, and the next few weeks ought to see an adequate roadway paved between the home of the 1200 or more residents of the post and the seven or eight thousand residing in town.

There are some rumors of other paving projects inside the city limits and we hope they will be true rumors. For instance, some are urging the paving of West Gurley and Grove street to the city limits. This would help out the traffic from that important district of Pine Crest and suburb of Miller Valley.

L. A. GETS A NEW KICK

OVER a hundred businessmen from Los Angeles spent a day in and around Prescott and were not asked to buy a thing.

That must have been a strange experience for these coast excursionists. We are told that at other points on their swing into Arizona, they were offered everything from town lots to oil stock. But not in Yavapai county.

It is no idle jest that the Angelenos enjoyed their stay here more fully than any other they made on the trip. They had their eyes opened to the wonderful scenery of Northern Arizona, and they say that the views along the Prescott-Jerome highway amazed them. They had never dreamed of such a highway.

Over a hundred businessmen of Los Angeles are returning home with a new idea about Prescott. To many Californians, Phoenix is the only city in this state. They had a hazy idea that there was a wide place in the road, called Prescott. Now they know that the capital of Northern Arizona is a beautiful little paved city with the best public building in the state and a crowd of home boosters the equal of any local-patriots in the southwest.

So Prescott did not lose anything by welcoming the Angelenos. Arizona is the natural recipient of the overflow of Southern California boosting, and every time the neighbor state scores a point it will rebound to the credit of this state.

Similarly, Tucson and Phoenix are both conducting great publicity campaigns. The money they hope to spend will total $150,000. That money cannot be spent without benefiting the entire state.

THE ISSUE IS NOT DEAD

BACK of all the disputing over the local supervisor contest was the issue of Prescott Forward. The defeat of the Prescott candidate has not destroyed or even bent that issue.

It is still desirable for this city, the largest in the county, to have roads at its gates, over which the people can pass. It hasn't those roads now.

More months have passed since the public's attention was called to the delay on the road entering East Gurley street. Yet that highway is not complete. A perfectly good bridge is standing idle across Granite creek a mile below town, and the approaching roads are not in shape for traffic.

HEGOL AND THE FOOL

"What is Love?" the maiden queried
 Of the Wise Philosopher;
 And in accents slow and wearied
 Thus the sage replied to her:
 "Love is a proclivity
 Of the ideality
 Of the relativity
 Of the true reality
 Of a little joy or tittle,
 Of the great Totality
 Of the Being, blind and mute,
 Thought of as the Absolute."
 "What is Love?" queried the maiden
 Of the Fool. He answered low
 Just the selfsame thing, but laden
 Less with verbiage: "I don't know!"
 —Ted Robinson in the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Who will be the first to blame the wreck on the election?

PROHIBITION AN ISSUE

NOT from the date of the adoption of the constitution until the entrenchment of national prohibition as a part of the organic law, was there a distinct issue made of amendments to that instrument. Even the amendments immediately following the Civil War were adopted as measures of party expediency, and not because any considerable party group was interested in enlarging the civic privileges of the manumitted black man.

The first ten amendments, popularly known as the Bill of Rights, were demanded by a political philosophy which refused to compromise with Federalism. They were an issue influencing the ratification of the constitution, not an issue in politics.

An outstanding feature of Tuesday's election was the injection of this question of changing the constitution into politics. It is an issue. It will be agitated and will have a marked influence on the voting until the Eighteenth Amendment is re-submitted, or until the present generation of voters has passed away. What the next generation may do if the amendment stand, is problematical.

The first effect of Tuesday's voting, in which six states pronounced in favor of at least a modification of the present liquor restrictions, will be a change in the Volstead Act, a change that will greatly moderate resentment against the amendment itself. That act declares that one-half of one per cent. of alcohol in a beverage makes it "intoxicating," and the Supreme Court has decided that congress has a right to fix the percentage. Such a beverage is not "intoxicating," and the same court probably would decide that congress has a right to fix an alcoholic content of four per cent for beer, and 10 to 15 per cent for wine, although it is quite possible to become intoxicated on such beverages.

Congressman are responsive to the will of the constituent, when it is known. The constituent seems to be tired of the lawlessness and hypocrisy that followed in the wake of prohibition.

Bootleggers will, of course, oppose any change in the present law, and, so, too, will the paid agents of the Anti-Saloon League. They are in a hopeless minority if the rest of the country get together.

WORDS BADLY CHOSEN

A young woman of heroic build met a man who had known her father and mother. As he gazed at this plump Juno the light of memory came into his eyes.

"Let me see," he nuzzed, "which side of the house do you resemble most?"

"Sir," she cried, in accents far from mild, "I don't resemble the side of any house."—Los Angeles Times.

OLD SCORES

"Now I've had my revenge," said the shoe shop proprietor to his friend, as a customer left.

"Revenge? How so?"

"Well, the young lady who just went out is a telephone operator. I gave her the wrong number."—London Opinion.

TOO LATE THEN

"Did you follow my advice of counting until you went to sleep?"

"Yes. I counted to 26,372."

"And then did you sleep?"

"No. It was time to get up!"—Passing Show, London.

BOYHOOD AMBITION

"Were any of your boyish ambitions ever realized?" asked the sentimentalist.

"Yes," replied the practical person. "When my mother used to cut my hair I often wished I might be baldheaded."—Chicago Daily News.

JEALOUS

"Robert," said the professor's wife, "who is this Violet Ray you are always talking about?"—Boston Transcript.

With the gradual elimination of the "little red schoolhouse" for the modern type of steam-heated, electric-lighted building, even in the rural districts, what will future politicians do for sentimental appeal?

By a process of elimination, the authorities of Jersey have narrowed the Hall suspects down to three. Continuing the process another month, maybe the case itself will also be eliminated.

For those of us who dislike the idea of sleeping any more than we can help, it will come as good news that Haiti's coffee crop is the biggest on record.

An English earl says that American women have an irresistible smile. True enough, but the man is just a few centuries late in the observation.

Why is it "the most beautiful women" always need that caption printed over her photograph to prove it when it's published in a newspaper?

As far as DeValera is concerned there will be no peace in Ireland, either with or without victory.

What redress has a mail order husband when his picture bride does not come up to the specifications of her photograph?

LA GRANGE IS HELD TO TRIAL

(From Tuesday's Daily)

Franklin La Grange yesterday was held under bond of $7,000 for trial at the next session of the Yavapai county superior court for the murder of Walter Steinbock two years ago.

Alexandra La Grange, wife of the accused slayer, at first also held on a murder charge, was detained yesterday as a material witness, under bond of $1,000. Neither La Grange nor his wife had furnished bond up to a late hour last night.

The hearing was held yesterday morning and afternoon in the local justice court, with Judge Clyde B. Jones of Jerome presiding. La Grange probably will come up for trial before the end of this month.

ARGUE ON NEW TRIAL GRANTED TO LUMBER CO.

(From Thursday's Daily)

The Case of the Hundred Books again went before the superior court yesterday when attorneys for J. B. Johnson sought to set aside an order granting the Prescott Lumber company a new trial in the damage case.

Once more, and just as in the earlier stages of this peculiarly mixed litigation, the lawyers were entrenched behind parapets of law books and they bombarded Judge Sweeney with arguments until they had fairly exhausted both him and the texts. Then the case was taken under advisement.

Johnson sued the lumber company for having removed a number of light frame buildings from the site of the old Klein sanitarium south of town. The company countered that it had a perfectly good execution from the sheriff. The first trial resulted in a verdict for Johnson, after long delays arising out of alleged faulty service and arguments over jurisdiction.

RECONSTRUCTION TO BRING FRIENDSHIP FOR BRITAIN, U. S.

(From Thursday's Daily)

The period of reconstruction following upon the close of the World war should cement friendly relations between England and the United States, Dr. E. Lee Howard, pastor of the Congregational church, declared in an Armistice day address at the Red Cross house at Whipple Barracks Saturday morning.

Drawing an analogy between the World war and the Civil war, Dr. Howard sought to demonstrate that as the period of reconstruction in this country has ended in healing the breach between north and south, so the present period should dissolve historic enmities between Great Britain and this country.

About 200 officers, patients and members of the hospital personnel attended the services, which were held at 9:30 in order to permit those present to attend the Armistice day exercises down town. The Red Cross stage and auditorium was decorated in the national colors with American flags and red, white and blue bunting. The program, arranged by Red Cross Director A. W. McMillen, was as follows:

Solo: "Christ in Flanders"—Miss Florence Allebaugh of the post aides. Reading: "We're Glad We Served You," by Jack Mitchell, Mrs. Harry T. Southworth. Quartet: "A Lullaby"—Judge Richard Lamson and Messrs. Gary Vyne, D. W. Russell and Lawrence Ingraham. The program closed with the Star Spangled Banner, which the entire audience, led by the quartet, joined in singing.

Friday evening the Badger orchestra visited the post and played for the men in Ward 10, giving a program which was greatly appreciated by the men, who extended their appreciation to the high school boys and their leader and to Dr. and Mrs. R. E. Buck, who took the musicians to and from the post. The members of the orchestra are: Arthur Davis, violin; Joe Heap, saxophone; Lester Smith, drums, and Joe Eckert, piano. Miss Hawkinson is the orchestra leader.

CIVIL CASES SET FOR TRIAL

Judge Lamson's civil division of the superior court will be busy just as soon as the lawyers arrive at a case that is ready to go to trial. Jurors will be used to determine the issues in some of the following lawsuits, set for trial as indicated:

November 15—Babbitt Bros. Trading company versus William Wingfield.

November 20—C. D. Rynearson versus Great Western Tufa & Cement company.

November 24—Frank Mulcare versus Julius Warlop.

November 27—Addie Rano versus Granite Dells Outing association.

November 28—Before Judge Baughn: R. W. Bullard versus W. T. Sawyer. Before Judge Lamson: Stasia versus D. L. Robinson.

December 5—Rova versus Perry J. Tracy.

December 12—Joseph Huber versus G. M. Johnson.

LAW FIRM HAS NEW OFFICES

(From Sunday's Daily)

Within two weeks what promises to be the handsomest suit of law offices in town will be completed in the old Hetherington block, and the firm of Anderson, Gale & Nilsson will move in from their present suite in the Prescott State bank building.

For the past three or four days workmen have been busy tearing out the front of the Link Smith grocery store and the W. W. Ross drug store and remodeling the interiors. The fronts have been boarded for construction of window sills four feet from the street level, and doors are being cut through the interior dividing wall.

The offices will be divided into two main sections. That formerly occupied by Link Smith will contain a large reception room and stenographers' office occupying about two-thirds of the store-space. At the rear of this room will be the firm's law library.

The other side, that formerly occupied by W. W. Ross, will be partitioned into three offices, of which the first will be occupied by LeRoy Anderson, the second by Alfred Gale and the third by George Nilsson. Doors will be hung between these offices and others will lead from them to the reception room and library.

The entrance to the new offices will be through the reception room. Handsome plate glass windows will be set in on the street front of both the reception room and the office room. Hardwood floors and mahogany woodwork will be installed in the interior of the suite. The walls and trimmings will be in ivory.

MAN AND WOMAN ARE ARRESTED FOR THEFT

Mrs. Alice Hamm and Theodore Crites will appear before Justice McLane at 10 o'clock this morning for trial on a charge of petit larceny.

Crites and Mrs. Hamm were arrested yesterday by Deputy Sheriff Mosher, when Alberto Najera complained that they had stolen two cords of oak fire-wood from his place.

The defendants were released on their own recognizance, after pleading not guilty at an arraignment in justice court.

"GOODBYE, GOD BLESS YOU"

Eugene Field's famous poem as read by Mrs. H. T. Southworth at the Yavapai club luncheon November 11 by way of farewell to members of the Los Angeles chamber of commerce sociability tour:

I like the Anglo-Saxon speech,
 With its direct revealing;
 It takes a hold and seems to reach
 Way down into your feelings.
 That some folks deem it rude I know,
 And therefore they abuse it;
 But I have never found it so.
 Above all else I use it.
 I don't object that men should use
 The Gallic they have paid for.
 With "Au revoir," "Adieu ma chérie,"
 For that's what French was made for.

But when a crony takes your hand
 At parting, to address you,
 He drops all foreign lingo, and
 He says, "Goodbye, God bless you."
 This seems to me a sacred phrase,
 With reverence impassioned,
 A thing come down from righteous days.

Quantitatively but nobly fashioned,
 It well befits an honest face,
 A voice that's round and cheerful.
 It stays the sturdy in his place,
 And soothes the weak and fearful.
 Into the porches of the ears
 It steals with subtle unction,
 And all day long with pleasing song,
 It lingers to caress you.
 I'm sure no human heart goes wrong,
 That's told "Goodbye, God bless you."
